Enrollment springs past last year

By Brandi Tippis
Administration Writer

University enrollment broke a spring-semester record this year with 24,098 students, an increase of 3.1 percent from last year.

Roland Keim, SIUC acting director of admissions and records, said the high enrollment did not catch SIUC officials off-guard.

SIUC also had record enrollment last fall with figures reaching 24,869.

"There's always been a decrease from fall to spring semester because a number of students drop out or fail," Keim said. "It's just normal attrition."

SIUC probably will see an increase in enrollment for the next couple of years, Keim said.

Figures released Tuesday show the number of students on and off campus rose 3.1 percent during the last year. The on-campus count is 21,127, an increase of 381. SIUC has 2,971 students enrolled at off-campus locations, an increase of 350.

SIUC, as well as other universities across the nation, have been projecting a decrease in enrollment for the next couple of years because there have been fewer high school graduates and college-age people in general, Keim said.

But the economy has played a large role in the surge of students to SIUC, he said.

A slow economy makes college degrees more attractive to high school graduates who cannot find jobs, he said.

Higher expectations in the job market from employers and perspective employees also may account for the increase, Keim said.

Hofeld attacks policies of rival at SIUC speech

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

U.S. senatorial candidate Albert Hofeld renewed attacks against his incumbent opponent Tuesday and outlined his plans to help the United States out of its domestic troubles.

Hofeld, a 55-year-old Chicago attorney, will run against Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Belleville, and Cook County Recorder of Deeds Carol Moseley for the Democratic nomination March 17.

He was at SIUC Tuesday afternoon as part of a campaign tour.

Hofeld attacked a recent television commercial in which Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, calls Dixon a "partner in the fight for education." Hofeld cited seven major votes in which Dixon canceled Simon's support for federal education measures.

"If Alan Dixon and Paul Simon are partners in education, then it's more like sparring partners," Hofeld said. "The fact is Paul Simon can give Alan Dixon his support, but Alan Dixon can't rent Paul Simon's record."

Hofeld criticized Sen. Alan Dixon for supporting tax policies that have cost the United States jobs while accepting PAC money from companies moving plants abroad.

Premiere primary concludes

New Hampshire residents vote to decide campaign leader

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — New Hampshire residents voted in large numbers Tuesday in the nation's first primary that could decide how big a challenge faces President Bush and which Democrat might break out of the pack.

On the Republican side, the big question was how deeply conservative commentator Patrick Buchanan might cut into Bush's popularity in a state that has been hard hit by the recession.

For the Democrats, the five major candidates — former Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa and former California Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown Jr. — waited to see how the outcome would affect their campaigns.

"I think I'm going to win," Bush said during a meeting with Republican leaders at the White House. "I feel very confident. I've had wonderful support, including a lot of people around this table."

Asked by reporters if he hadn't already lost just by Buchanan making a run at all, Bush laughed and said, "If I listen to you guys, I might have."

Buchanan, who has made a run from the right on the grounds Bush has deserted the Republican conservatives, was upbeat.

New council forms to assist students with financial needs

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

A new council that represents Illinois college students has called for the state government to meet more adequately growing student financial needs.

Student members of the four Illinois university governing boards met last week at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign for the first meeting of the Illinois Student Representatives to Governing Boards Council.

Members established the council and discussed methods to combat the growing financial burdens placed on college students.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education's tuition policy requires long-term tuition and fee increases to keep pace with increases in inflation, but tuition and fee increases at SIUC soared beyond inflation rates in the past decade.

The IBHE price index was 73.7 percent between 1980 and 1990, while tuition and fees at SIUC reached 272 percent, increasing from $574 to $1,560 a semester.

The ISRGC meeting ended with a unified call for increased commitment to higher education through more adequate financial support from the state.

U of I Student Trustee Byron P. Mitchell requested the creation of ISRGC because the council is a much-needed force in the legislature, he said.

ISRGC was created to present a unified response to problems facing students in higher education and to lobby the state and federal government.

"There are a lot of issues facing students in higher education that need attention," Mitchell said. "This council will give us more leverage in bargaining power in the General Assembly and on the governing boards for concerns of higher

SRAs post bond after theater arrest

By Scott Wuerz
Police Writer

Two SIUC student residence hall assistants posted $500 bond each Tuesday afternoon following arrest in connection with a burglary at the AMC University Place 8 Theater.

Carbondale Police Sgt. Steve Odom said Thomas J. Meyer, 21, and Richard D. Hathaway, 21, were arrested at about 3:15 a.m. Sunday after allegedly tripping an alarm in the theater.

Meyer, a senior in aviation management from McHenry, and Hathaway, a senior in advanced technical studies from Decatur, have been in the Jackson County jail since Sunday.

Hathaway was arrested near the theater after a short foot chase, Odom said, and Meyer was arrested at his room at 8 a.m.

Sunday.

Sharon Korondo, spokeswoman for the Jackson County state's attorney, said both suspects were charged with burglary and possession of burglary tools. Hathaway also was charged with unlawful use of a weapon.

At the time of his arrest, Hathaway allegedly was in

U.S. ices France, closes on medal

ALBERTVILLE, France (UPI) — The U.S. hockey team took one more step up the mountain Tuesday while the dashing Alberto Tomba skied down one into Olympic history.

The unbeaten United States moved within one victory of its first Olympic hockey medal in a dozen years with a 4-1 decision over France to advance to the semifinals.

Having struggled through the first period and seemingly on their way to an embarrassing exit from medal contention, the Americans found a spark from Keith Tkachuk and Ted Donato.

The game turned nasty in the final minutes and escalated to a melee afterward, but the victory put the United States into Friday's semifinals against the winner of Wednesday night's game between Finland and the Unified Team.

The American victory capped an eventful Olympic day in which Tomba skied with his customary panache in the sunshine of the Alps. With a sensational showing in the giant slalom, the Italian became the first skier to win the gold medal in the same alpine event at two straight Winter Games.

There were two other firsts: South Korea won its first Winter Olympics medal and Japan won its first gold medal in 20 years.

And the Canadian hockey team won a gripping 4-3 quarterfinal with Germany — a game that was decided by a sudden-death shootout that ended only because the puck rolled to a stop on top of the goal line.

If the United States wins its next game it would be assured at least a silver medal and would play for the gold on the last day of the Games. If the Americans lose Thursday night, they would still have a shot at the bronze.

The United States has not won an Olympic ice hockey medal since the 1980 team pulled off its startling upset of the Soviets en route to the gold.

Tomba, whose power and strength give him the look of a boxer rather than a finesse skier, rewarded his thousands of fans much earlier in the day by going out and doing exactly what was expected of him.

Known in Italy as "The Beast," Tomba won the first run ahead of Marc Girardelli.

Coach's burst woke up team in time for win

MERIBEL, France (UPI) — Dave Peterson made two key coaching decisions Tuesday night: He screamed at his U.S. team when it needed a boost, and he shut up when his weary goalie needed to be left alone.

The result spelled a 4-1 victory for the U.S. squad over France, moving the Americans into the semifinals of the Olympic hockey tournament.

The United States found itself trailing 1-0 after one period and looked shaky at best, coming off a physically and emotionally draining game against Sweden 24 hours earlier. In the locker room before the second period, Peterson delivered a tongue-lashing that forward Ted Donato judged "a 10."

Donato then scored twice during a three-goal second-period flurry and set up a key insurance goal to rally the Americans.

"I thought we were a little lethargic and needed to get in the game," Peterson said. "You have to remember I'm a little loud anyway."

"Some guys were feeling a little sorry for themselves, saying 'I'm tired. It was a tough game last night,'" Donato recounted. "But we said, 'Hey, we've got 40 minutes to beat this team.'"

Keith Tkachuk started it rolling, tying it with a rebound on a power play at 5:43 of the second, and Donato put the Americans ahead to stay at 8:13 on a disputed goal. Marty McInnis got off a shot that goalie Petri Ylonen blocked, and Donato kicked in the rebound. The referee let it stand.

Dawgs score 18 victories by taking one at a time

By Tony Mancuso
Sports Editor

THE MEN'S BASKETBALL team has matched its 1991 win total of 18 and has four games left in the regular season to improve on that mark.

Coach Rich Herrin's Dawgs, who finished 18-14 last season, are 18-5 overall and 11-3 in the Missouri Valley. They stand atop the league after finishing a fourth-place 9-7 last season.

SIUC has a 1 1/2 game lead in the Valley over Illinois State and Southwest Missouri.

The Redbirds are 9-4 in the Valley and 12-10 overall. But should ISU tie the Salukis at the end of the season, the Salukis would hold an advantage because they have beaten the Redbirds in both games this season.

The Bears are 9-4 in conference and 16-6 overall. After getting off to a 1-4 MVC start, they have won eight straight. The streak includes a win at the Arena. SIUC's only home loss this season.

The Salukis will travel to Springfield, Mo., Feb. 29. The game will be on ESPN.

Herrin said the Salukis need to think about the games at hand rather than the possibility of a first-place showdown at Southwest.

"We are in good shape on the loss side," he said. "But because we are the team to beat, ... we bring out the best in everybody.

"(The game Saturday against) Tulsa will be tough," Herrin said. "We are not looking ahead of it."

Tulsa is two games behind the Dawgs. The Hurricane is 8-4 in the MVC and 11-10 overall. It is tied for fourth with Indiana State, 9-5 in the Valley and 10-12 overall.

Ministers want sentence suspended for 'hero' Tyson

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A group of black ministers portraying Mike Tyson as a "modern day hero" is leading a petition drive seeking a suspended sentence for the convicted rapist.

"We ask the court to consider that Mr. Tyson is one of a very few in number of modern-day African-American heroes," the petitions state. "It is very difficult, no matter what the reason, to see a fallen hero and not be affected."

The petitions were distributed to 30 churches in Indianapolis Sunday and the general public is being asked for signatures, the Rev. Melvin B. Gorton Sr. said Monday, one week after the former heavyweight champion was convicted for raping beauty pageant contestant Desiree Washington last summer.

Gorton and others in the "mercy for Tyson" drive said they already have 10,000 signatures and hope to get 100,000 on the petitions before sending them to Marion County Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford, who has set Tyson's sentencing for March 27.

The boxer realistically faces a likely sentence of less than 10 years.

Teams win on floor, not in stands

In case no one has noticed, Saluki basketball has been very successful and exciting this season.

The women's basketball team is in a close race with Southwest Missouri State for first place in the Gateway Conference. The men's basketball team is in first place in the Missouri Valley Conference, but the team has one of the lowest average home attendance figures in the league.

The small attendance at the home basketball games leads one to believe SIUC basketball has slipped from the students' minds.

Good attendance helps more than just to support the team. It shows the other teams and universities our students and faculty and the community are behind the Salukis' efforts. The Salukis should be drawing

From the Press Box
Norma Wilke

more people to the games simply because SIUC has a larger enrollment than any other school in the Gateway or Missouri Valley conferences.

The lack of attendance this season and last season at the games shows the opponents that the SIUC student body does not care enough to support one of the Salukis' most prominent seasons and one of its most successful teams.

The basketball program has risen to great heights since it began, but the student body needs to attend the games to know just how good our program and teams really are.

The largest attendance at a women's game thus far this season was in the opener against the University of Illinois, when 1,301 fans attended.

The average attendance for 1990-1991—when the women took second place in the Gateway—was 586 for women's games. It has gone up this season to an average of 716 people a

U.N. CHIEF PROPOSES ACTION IN YUGOSLAVIA — Secretary-General Boutros Ghali Tuesday proposed unprecedented U.N. action by recommending deployment of peacekeeping forces to uphold a cease-fire in the ex-Yugoslav republic of Croatia, despite opposition by at least one of the warring parties. Previously, the world agency has sent forces only if all sides accepted them, because otherwise there is a risk of armed confrontation between U.N. peacekeepers and local fighters.

UKRAINIAN DEFECTORS TO STAY IN RUSSIA — Ukraine was flatly rebuffed Tuesday at its demands that a dozen bomber crewmen be returned from Russia where they flew to avoid serving in Ukraine's separate republic military. All the pilots have been given new military assignments in Russia, and one said the unauthorized flight was justified as an act of conscience. "I have done just what my duty and conscience dictated to me," said one of the officers who led the flight.

EGYPT CLOSING TIES TO ISLAMIC REPUBLICS — Egypt, fearing Iranian Shiite influence in the Commonwealth of Independent States, has intensified plans to forge closer economic and religious ties with the independent former Soviet Muslim republics, Arab diplomats said Tuesday. ## Police to take pro-active approach in preventing increase of gangs

By Scott Wuerz
Police Writer

Police are adopting a pro-active approach to battle gang activity in the city that the Carbondale police chief says is in its infancy.

Local police are trying to avoid problems in which other cities are entrenched, Chief Don Strom said.

"When people think of gangs they think of cities like Miami and Los Angeles," he said. "But now you start to hear about towns of 2,000 people in Wyoming and Montana that woke up to find a gang problem one morning."

"We want to provide guidance and social alternatives to gang activities for young people now, instead of wishing we did something two years from now," he said.

Strom said Carbondale police attended a seminar Feb. 3 to 7 in Georgia. It was given by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Program, a federal organization which helps police, schools, social service organizations and housing organizations design strategies to fight drug abuse and gang activity on a local level.

"A lot of things contribute to a young person feeling they need to be involved in a gang," Strom said. "There are economic problems, and there are young people who just want to feel like they belong."

Carbondale has other unique elements which could contribute to the formation of gangs that other communities might not have to face. The university draws students from other communities to Carbondale and they have a definite influence on social activities.

Gang activities in Carbondale to date have been identified by the emergence of crack cocaine and its relationship with gang drug dealership, Strom said.

Police investigations have identified East St. Louis, a hub of gang activity in the midwest, as the main supplier of Carbondale's crack cocaine market.

"The Office of Juvenile Justice programs has helped us to get together with community members and provide alternative activities to young people who might be vulnerable to gang activity," Strom said.

"Fortunately Carbondale has a committed community, and they have provided us with a great deal of resources such as an excellent park district and other activities provided by the university."

Jerry Compton, supervisor of the Carbondale chapter of Lifesavers, a nationwide program that trains high school students to help peers resolve their problems, said identifying and resolving problems in their early stages can help prevent bigger problems in the future.

"It's very difficult to know exactly what kids do on Friday and Saturday nights," he said. "But on many occasions problems like drug and alcohol abuse, and even suicide can be prevented if kids have a place to turn in the early stages of their problems."

Compton said the Lifesavers program also provides weekend activities such as dances to give students alternative social activities.

Golden Apple program to recruit future teachers

By Christine Leninger
Administration Writer

Local high school students will get a chance to attend college as a Golden Apple Scholar this spring.

The Golden Apple Scholars program is coming to Southern Illinois from Chicago in search of minority students interested in teaching as a profession.

Gov. James Edgar announced the expansion of the program throughout Illinois last month.

Edgar said in a statement that he is excited about the expansion which will give students throughout Illinois the same opportunities to fulfill their aspirations of becoming teachers.

"This partnership will help prepare high school graduates to become our future teachers, teachers who are thoroughly confident and competent to face even the toughest challenges in classrooms throughout Illinois," Edgar said.

Nancy Quisenberry, associate dean of the College of Education, has been named along with four other SIUC employees to the outreach committee designed to expand the program to Southern Illinois this spring.

"The program has proven effective in Chicago, and I am glad the Southern Illinois students will now be able to participate in the program," Quisenberry said.

"SIUC will play a special part in this program because many of the students from this region plan to attend college here," she said.

Students interested in teaching are nominated in their junior year of high school and selected in December of their senior year.

Cheryl Watkins, outreach coordinator for the Southern Illinois Golden Apple campaign, said she traveled to Carbondale and Marion high schools to present information regarding the program to guidance counselors.

"There has been wonderful response in Carbondale and Marion high schools. I already have received some nominations for scholars," Watkins said.

Golden Apple scholars attend any of 12 colleges and universities in Illinois and are offered year-round work study placements, internships, guidance and financial aid during four years of college.

Among the colleges participating in the program are SIUC, SIUE, University of Illinois, Illinois State University, Western Illinois University,

Pranksters cry wolf with fake bomb calls

A BOMB THREAT PHONED IN to a campus building is a threat in more than one sense of the word. First, there is the intimidating idea of an explosive device hidden somewhere in a heavily inhabited building; second, there is the tendency of those affected by repeated scare calls to become immune to them.

That immunity could one day cost a life, or more than one. University Security is required to notify inhabitants of any threatened building of the call, and instructors in class must inform their students of the possible danger, but the decision to leave the area is up to the individual.

ANYONE WHO SPENDS MUCH TIME in a building frequently targeted by threat calls can eventually begin to ignore them, knowing that previous calls have all been pranks. For instance, students working in a computer lab may be unwilling to leave and risk losing the computerized material they have worked hours on, believing themselves safe.

BUT IT ONLY TAKES ONE WELL-PLACED explosive to bring down a wall and end a life, proving that to issue a bomb warning is not always to cry wolf.

THE PRANKSTERS PROBABLY FEEL NO GUILT now, with no life lost and no property damaged. A harmless joke, and all in fun, they rationalize. A real explosion, they might believe, is unthinkable, and it could never happen here.

But the unthinkable has a nasty tendency to become the actual when it is least expected. A tragedy is the unthinkable brought to life, and no one can predict tragedy except tragedy's architects.

NO BOMB CALL AT SIUC IN THE LAST FIVE years has proved genuine, but that says nothing about the future. It is likely that most of the calls received at SIUC are made by students, using a bomb threat as a ploy to escape some responsibility—an exam, a project due, and so on. It's no coincidence that more than a third of the 28 threats received in 1989 were made on or near the week of final examinations.

For supposedly "adult" students to fall back on childish pranks to avoid collegiate obligations is pathetic and dangerous. The prank caller is ignorant of the academic schedules he throws into disarray and the tone of panic he creates by his actions.

BUT EVEN THOSE RESULTS ARE ONLY short-term. The long-term threat of repeated prank calls is the apathy they create. One day, thanks to years of false alarms, someone in an SIUC classroom or office may be slow to recognize real danger.

THAT SLOWNESS MAY PROVE FATAL. When it does, not only the bomber but the countless jokers who have telephoned before him will be to blame.

Intoxication doesn't get full respect

Getting drunk is not the odious, contemptible and low-down waste of time it appears to be at first blush. Getting drunk is fun. It fills a hearty soul with good cheer. It makes your cheeks red; it makes you good as Caesar! Getting drunk makes people who think beer tastes bad very, very nervous. It's romantic. Heck, I'd probably still be a virgin if not for getting drunk.

Getting drunk makes you brave, makes you feel like the king who knows his people. And getting drunk provides a perfect extenuation for all your favorite transgressions of good taste.

Some people say that getting drunk costs too much. Listen to your television. It is the cheapest, quickest and easiest way there is to feel like a big shot.

Instant gratification has been a hallmark of this great nation for as long as I can remember. Getting drunk is good for the economy. It helps thousands of bartenders, correctional officers and trauma surgeons in their glorious churning out of gross national product.

Some people complain that getting drunk causes hangovers. The nausea brought by hangovers is nature's salutary antidote to those extra pounds getting drunk may bring.

Some say getting drunk is a gravely pernicious health risk. But when the mind is subliminally charmed by getting drunk, who cares? Heaven loves a deep and gorgeous thirst.

The only bad thing about getting drunk is its lack of respect from today's students.—Lawrence Lofgren, graduate student, law.

Rednecks beware: Student sends anti-hick message

I am writing this letter to warn the student populace of a new danger to America, one even greater than communism. That danger is hick-ism. Yes, even in the environs of Chicago, one can find people listening to Randy Travis and dancing the two-step.

To combat this danger, I propose the formation of a new organization, the Alliance to Contain Hick-ism (ACH). Composed solely of students who live north of Peoria and east of the Mississippi, its job will be to bring civilization to the primitive native people of Southern Illinois, attacking hick-ism at its source.

Mostly this will consist of seminars showing the natives how to act civilized. Here are some examples of ACH seminars:

1. Correct Speech—Taught by a genuine New Yorker, the natives will learn how to address someone who, for example, has blocked their parking space due to a poor job of parking: "Hey! Whassamattayou?! Doncha know how to park a cah, you crazy @$%^&*!"

2. Modern Survival—When Southern Illinois has become civilized, the natives will have to know how to live in this strange new culture. They'll have to know that when a big, hairy man with an Italian accent comes to their business office demanding a "kickback," he isn't asking them to demonstrate a dance step. They'll also have to be taught to duck when they hear automatic gunfire, especially if there are people calling themselves "Crips" or "Blonds" in the area at the time.

This and other benefits of modern civilization can be brought to the natives, but we must hurry. Already many hapless females are getting hopelessly addicted to Garth Brooks.—Tom Giesler, sophomore, biological sciences.

Justice's drug speech ignored by mainstream print reporters

On Feb. 4, while listening to the National Public Radio news, I heard an extremely unusual story about Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist. Rehnquist was speaking before the American Bar Association in Dallas when he criticized the Bush administration and Congress' "War on Drugs." He said that "the drug war is overloading the federal court system, and degrading the quality of justice which Americans have come to expect from their federal courts."

I picked my jaw up off the floor and rushed out to get a copy of the day's newspaper. The story was nowhere to be found. The next day's paper made no mention either. When I checked into the Tuesday and Wednesday editions of several major newspapers, I found that NOT ONE had covered the story. I have ordered a copy of the broadcast in question, but it has not yet arrived.

So why is it that the chief justice of the Supreme Court lost out to the Associated Press' Feb. 4 story from Dallas, namely that homosexuals now have the long-deserved right to be police officers there? I don't know. It's just one of those things that makes me say AARRR-GHHHH!"—Drew Hendricks, president, SIUC NORML, junior, journalism.

U.S. baseball made in Japan

American baseball owned by Japanese? Yuk!

I would never watch a game played by a Japanese-owned team. Are we going to let them take over everything?

I think Americans had better wake up and do something or America could be owned by a country who couldn't best us by military force, but maybe they can otherwise.

What is wrong with people? Is money so important that corporations sacrifice what a country stands for?

Enough is enough!

Wake up, America.—Edna Hand, microbiology, Storekeeper III.

The council also approved a resolution concerning higher education funding in general, encouraging greater financial contributions by the state to students in higher education.

Democrats were outside polling places early in the morning trying to sway last-minute undecided voters.

Tsongas and Clinton had been running first and second in the pre-voting day polls and both were looking for a strong showing to try to dispel some concerns about their electability—Tsongas that he is more than a regional candidate and Clinton that he has questions about his personal life that would keep him from the White House.

Tsongas stressed he is a national candidate, saying, "Hopefully, tonight will give a sense of our message nationally."

Clinton also was looking ahead. "I think we're going to be doing pretty well today," he said. "I think this is going to be a long, hard primary fight."

The others wanted a strong finish to keep their campaigns healthy and viable as the primary season moves on to other areas of interest contributions to fund a campaign in which he claims he's fighting to protect American workers," Hofeld said, citing that Dixon received $22,800 in PAC contributions from companies that have moved plants outside the country. "I think it's time for our government to close these corporate tax loopholes."

Hofeld said, if elected, he will fight for congressional reform to restrict the influence of PACs. Hofeld's reform calls for a limit on senatorial terms, caps on campaign spending and the requirement of commercial television stations to furnish free air time to congressional candidates.

"I can think of many people who would make excellent U.S. senator from Illinois," Hofeld said. "But the system demands that you either prostitute yourself to the special interests or have wealth of your own."

Although Hofeld attacked Dixon repeatedly, Hofeld said he is not ignoring Democratic opponent Carol Moseley.

"I think there is enough dissatisfaction with Alan Dixon to go around," Hofeld said. "Last week's decision by the Illinois Federation of Teachers not to endorse Dixon is proof of that."

Hofeld detailed his plans for Universal College Access that would allow loans to students provided and administered by the federal government, income with holding for repayment of the loans, which would be capped at 5 percent and loan deferrer repayment for graduates entering fields in public service, public health care and other areas where there is shortage or need.

"This plan would let any kid who wanted to go to college, to go to college," Hofeld said. "I could never have made it through law school without loans."

Hofeld outlined his plan for a national apprenticeships program between high schools and business.

"Directing vocational and technical training away from the class room and into the work place will enable students to learn employable skills while the United States develops a more competitive work force," he said.

"America has to look in the mirror and change. We need to stop bashing the Japanese, although some of that is deserved, and ask ourselves, 'Can we do more? Can we be more productive?' and the answer is 'yes' we can."

Hofeld also defended his position on gun control and the Chicago Housing Authorities ban on guns saying the streets of Chicago had become a "war zone." "We can no longer avoid this," Hofeld said. "I want to ban all assault rifles and a stricter control on handguns."

Hofeld called for a national health care package that guarantees coverage for all U.S. citizens regardless of pre-existing conditions.

"Health insurance is designed to spread the cost around," Hofeld said. "Not avoid liability."

Hofeld's plan would allow U.S. citizens a choice of doctors and caps on medical and pharmaceutical costs.

itself as a legitimate force in university matters is the most impressive outcome of the meeting, Mitchell said.

"The most successful outcome of the first meeting is the fact that we came together and created a legitimate council," he said. "That's unprecedented—I see this council as a strong force in Springfield in the future."

SIUC Student Trustee William Hall said the council will give students a more important role in crucial decision-making by the governing boards and legislators.

"(ISRGBC) is a response to the growing need for students to more successfully influence tuition and financial aid and other decisions made by the governing boards and the state and federal government," he said.

ISRGBC will have obvious influence in the General Assembly, but more subtly, the council will generate enthusiasm among governing board members to persuade those boards on student issues, Hall said.

"Student representatives on governing boards usually feel outnumbered and ignored," he said. "This council provides documented ammunition and moral support to students on those boards."

the country.

Also being promoted on the Democratic side was a write-in campaign for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who is one of several politicians being mentioned as a possible late entry into the race. A strong write-in would only accelerate the move to get someone else in the campaign.

New Hampshire voters, who are small in number but by being first can wield power beyond their size, were flooding to the polls in big numbers with Democrats running ahead of the pace of four years ago.

Secretary of State William Gardner predicted 125,000 Democrats and 165,000 Republicans will go to the polls Tuesday. He said the turnout could top 47 percent, which is close to the record turnout of 51 percent in 1980.

At one ward in Concord, voters lined up outside a local school to cast their primary votes under cloudy skies. "I've never seen a line here before during any election," said one man in the line.

"I expect a record turnout," said Jane Ireland, the town clerk of Rye, a small community on the New Hampshire seacoast.

Traditionally, the first votes are counted shortly after midnight from Dixville Notch and most of the towns' 31 voters cast ballots for Libertarian candidate Andre Marrou, who received 11 votes.

Among the Republicans, Bush received nine votes to Buchanan's three, while three Republicans wrote in consumer advocate Ralph Nader and one wrote in Tsongas. On the Democratic side, Clinton got three votes and Tsongas one.

This was the first New Hampshire primary when a Libertarian ballot has been made available due to the fact that the party won 3 percent of the gubernatorial vote in 1990.

Marrou's reaction to the Dixville Notch vote was, "This was much better than we expected. It (Libertarian) will be the party of the 21st century."

Counselors to prepare minorities for future at career advisement fair

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

Officials estimate minorities will comprise the majority of the U.S. work force by the year 2000, and SIUC career counselors want them to be prepared.

Michael Haywood, director of minority programs in the college of business, said the recently published "Work Force 2000" by William B. Johnston and Arnold H. Packer, said jobs will be filled by more young minority workers than Caucasian workers.

A career fair focusing on minority career opportunities will take place from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. today in Ballroom B at the Student Center.

During the baby boom from 1946 to 1961, minority families had considerably more children than white families.

In the year 2000, jobs will be open to these minority children who now have become adults, Haywood said in "Work Force 2000."

Carl Flowers, placement counselor for the University Placement Center, said the fair has been patterned after similar fairs at other universities.

"Other universities, such as the University of Illinois and De Paul University, have held similar multicultural career fairs, and we're trying to provide the type of help to our students here at SIUC," said Flowers.

The fair is sponsored by the University Placement Center and Minority Engineering Program in cooperation with Student Development, Blacks Interested in Business and the Organization of Multi-Ethnic Students.

"Employers are interested in meeting special populations at colleges, so we're having the fair so these employers can meet with bright SIUC students," Flowers said.

Even though the fair is targeted at minority students, the fair is open to anyone.

All students interested are invited to the fair, said Johnny Patterson, director of minority engineering program.

'Big Three' monopolize sky as others flee for Chapter 11

Bad economy, war force many airlines to file bankruptcy

By Christy Gutowski
General Assignment Writer

Three major airline companies continue to control the friendly skies as most other carriers sought protection in federal bankruptcy court last year.

United, American and Delta, known as the "Big Three," control 51.3 percent of the industries air passenger traffic. John Danforth, R-Mo., has called for re-regulation measures.

"Deregulation has failed," Danforth said in a speech last March to airport executives. "Three carriers dominating our skies, controlling our airports and dictating their prices to consumers is not what Congress had in mind when it deregulated the airline industry."

The deregulation law of 1978 was implemented to do away with "unreasonable industry concentration, excessive market dominance and monopoly power."

But increasing Chapter 11 filings and industry consolidations are evidence that competition is vanishing instead.

Last year in December, Pan Am, the first airline to fly around the world, filed for bankruptcy protection, putting 750,000 people out of work.

The airline currently is in liquidation, selling its London routes to United and some routes to Delta Air Lines.

Midway Airlines Inc. and Eastern also succumbed to bankruptcy in 1991.

American West Airlines, reporting a loss of $6 billion in 1991, filed for Chapter 11 protection June 27 last year.

The airline now is reorganizing, arranging additional financing of about $200 million and attempting to sell its Nagoya, Japan route for $15 million.

Continental also filed under Chapter 11 in late 1990, blaming high fuel prices. Officials say it may merge with Northwest or reorganize.

But the most recent to dive into bankruptcy is Trans World Airlines, which filed bankruptcy last month.

TWA Chairman Carl Icahn said in a statement the filing was under a pre-arranged plan that eliminated about $1 billion in debt and an estimated $150 million in annual interest charges from the airline's balance sheet.

Icahn said at a news conference TWA will continue to operate as usual and its flight schedule will not be interrupted by the filing.

"I am confident that the reorganization, combined with prior cost savings, will result in a stronger, more competitive airline," he said.

The Airline Competition Act

proposed by James Oberstar, D-Minn., permits the sale of slots, gate and international routes only after the Department of Transportation certifies they were sold for a "reasonable price."

Prices now are established on the free market and the highest bidder wins, although international route sales must meet general public-interest principles of the DOT.

The bill would permit up to 49 percent foreign ownership of U.S. airlines under specific circumstances.

The Middle East crisis and the recession that began 18 months ago have devastated airlines, said Bob Levin, associate director for the General Accounting Office's department of transportation in Washington.

When Saddam Hussein sent his troops into Kuwait, the price of jet fuel increased and number of passengers decreased, he said.

Because of a perceived threat of terrorism, many people stayed home, said Vicki Beckman, a manager for B&A Travel Service Ltd. in Carbondale.

"The industry will never be able to regain the amount of money lost last year," she said.

Airlines enforced "their highest level of security (level four) and lowered ticket prices to Europe, she said.

"Airlines pushed travel to Europe by dropping fares to $348

Spring break vacationers choose driving instead of paying air fare

By Christy Gutowski
General Assignment Writer

Fewer students are choosing to fly to their spring break destinations this year, local travel agents say.

Students flocking to places such as Cajun, Padre Islands and Florida for spring break are choosing alternative travel measures instead of flying.

"More students are driving this year," said Vicki Beckman, a manager of B&A Travel Inc.

High prices of airline tickets and the nation's weak economy are keeping them from using air travel, she said.

Dirk Borgsmiller of Borgsmiller Travel said his agency had less inquiries from students requesting tickets for spring break than he has in the past five years.

"I've chosen to drive over spring break this year because prices are too high."

—Shari Miller

Prices for most markets are 30 percent higher than their normal range, Borgsmiller said.

SIUC student Shari Miller said she is driving this year.

"I've chosen to drive over spring break this year because prices are too high," said Miller, a senior in education from Oak Lawn.

Deregulation of the airline industry in 1978 has led, in part, to the fluctuation of airline prices.

Airlines may lower or raise their prices as far as they want to go, said Bob Levin, associate director for General Accounting Office's department of transportation in Washington.

Several airline companies filed for Chapter 11 protection, leaving less competition in the industry, he said.

"Many smaller companies are having trouble competing with the wealthier, bigger airlines," Levin said.

Some travel agencies are asking consumers who are flying on airlines that have filed for bankruptcy to pay for tickets by credit.

Ticket fares to Florida last year were as low as $198, Borgsmiller said.

"Now that prices are back at a normal level, students feel the prices are too high," he said.

Prices are expected to rise after March 31, Beckman said.

Builder banks on indoor tomatoes for extra income, alternative crops

PITTSFIELD, (UPI) — During a snowstorm last week, Bill Scheiwe planted thousands of tomato seedlings.

By mid-April, regardless of the weather, Scheiwe hopes to be harvesting 3,000 pounds of tomatoes per week for Illinois grocery shoppers.

Scheiwe is a builder by trade but this year he started growing off-season tomatoes hydroponically in greenhouses to earn extra cash and offer shoppers a local alternative to the usual winter vegetables trucked from Mexico and California.

It's a cottage industry that Scheiwe said is attracting attention from rural Illinoisans who own a little land, want a side job with growth potential and are not afraid to work.

"There's a lot of people getting involved," said Scheiwe, who knows a factory worker, a farmer and a ventilation-business owner who are now growing off-season vegetables.

"It produces a product that doesn't use many natural resources and produces capital for three of four people," he said. "I'm not worried about competition—there's room for things like this."

Scheiwe, 50, got the idea from a friend who has greenhouses. He invested about $60,000 and last year started erecting three greenhouses of his own on 5 acres.

That was the easy part: Scheiwe's been building farm structures and selling construction supplies for years. A tougher job was devising a hydroponic system for the plants. He studied greenhouse operations in Tennessee, Mississippi and Iowa before settling on a system of bagging plant roots with a sawdust-bark mix and injecting fertilizer-enriched water into the bags.

The system uses less water than other hydroponic methods and involves less risk because a broken pump won't doom the crop, Scheiwe said. Nevertheless, like any greenhouse gardening, the system is labor intensive.

"There's just continuous work in those greenhouses," he said.

Plants must be pruned and staked. When blooming starts, they must be hand-pollinated every other day. Harvest requires hiring help for more than 10 weeks.

Then comes marketing. Scheiwe said he learned a lot from his mistakes last fall, when he tried to sell his first crop to out-of-state wholesalers. Now he's lined up grocery stores in the region that will sell his tomatoes.

'Wayne's World' parties on, does excellent in box office

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Paramount's "Wayne's World" involves plenty of education and wholesome fun for those who enjoy great drama—not.

But the movie has jumped from a basement to the big screen with hilarious success anyway.

Your totally excellent host is Wayne Campbell and with him, as always, is Garth.

"Wayne's World" is the name of a running skit that gained fast popularity on Saturday Night Live. It is about a fictional public access cable television show that runs from Wayne's basement and has become famous for its extreme close-ups of Wayne and his guests.

When it was limited on SNL, "Wayne's World" is completely unhindered on the screen. Michael Myers as Wayne and Dana Carvey as Garth are both fantastic.

Myers plays Wayne with wit and sarcasm. His cocky smile gives viewers the impression he is pulling a fast-one on everyone.

Carvey does the nervous Garth to a "T"—warped and shy. It was a particularly good move to give Garth his own distinctive role instead. Instead of being used as a prop, Garth has his own one liners and moments where he takes over the camera.

The best part of "Wayne's World" is the gags. The "Bohemian Rhapsody" sing along in Garth's Pacer was truly awesome.

The scene where Wayne knocks sponsorship, all the while prominently displaying Pizza Hut pizza, eating Doritos and taking Nuprin was pulled off perfectly and unexpectedly. Most of the best scenes came without warning.

Wayne's psychotic ex-girlfriend was a nice touch, as was the "Psycho" theme that played whenever she appeared. She seems to be indestructible, surviving falls and spills over the hood of a car while trying to gain Wayne's attention.

Appearances by stars abound in the movie. Ed O'Neill, from "Married With Children," plays a crazed restaurant worker, and Alice Cooper makes a cameo as himself, giving a mini-lecture on the origins of Milwaukee and its government. The actor who played the T-1000 in "Terminator 2," stops Wayne for speeding. Viewers laughed out loud when he pulled out a photo of John Conner and asks if Wayne had "seen this boy?" Wayne, obviously having seen T2, drove away screaming.

What probably saved this movie from being a bad "Bill and Ted" rip-off is that it is more than two hours of "Wayne's World" in the basement setting. A loose plot involves a corporate buy-out of Wayne's show, as well as a love interest for Wayne, the voluptuous Cassandra who the movie makers shamelessly costumed in every skin tight outfit they could find.

From there, "Wayne's World" is sort of a boy-loses-best-friend-and-girlfriend-and-has-to-get-them-all-back type of theme.

But it is a theme that relates to everybody who can imagine themselves in their own little world of Waynes.

CD boxes labeled as hazardous by some artists

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Music artists use compact disc packaging to raise awareness of political issues—but some artists have called the longboxes a hazard to the environment.

On his album "The Soul Cages," Sting calls the CD longbox environmentally hazardous. Only the first printing of his album came in longboxes.

Sting fronted a short-lived movement called "Ban the Box," which called for the banning of CD longbox packaging.

The CD longbox is used partially for cover art and partially for security.

Chas Vale, manager of Disc Jockey, said the odd shape makes them difficult.

New methods of CD packaging are being slowly implemented.

One type is the Digi-Pac, a folding cardboard case.

The Digi-Pacs, however, do not protect compact discs from any kind of moisture.

"It's not going to last," said Dennis Haworth, manager of Discount Den.

"Humidity affects it, and if you spill something on it, it's going to be ruined," he said. "And then what are you going to do with the CD?"

The Digi-Pacs were created as an alternative to longboxes and the hard plastic jewel cases in which CDs are sold.

Vale said Digi-Pacs will not remain in use.

"There's too many audiophiles who want jewel boxes," Vale said. "And the Digi-Pacs don't fit in the storage racks for CDs."

An alternative method of CD casing is a reusable plastic casing that locks onto the CD jewel box and can only be taken off with a key.

The casings are reusable and help prevent theft.

"If the mall security sees you with the cases, it's instant grounds for arrest," said Jala Merritt, supervisor at University Mall's Disc Jockey.

The production of the jewel cases, a type of polystyrene, is a highly toxic substance and in the top 20 of the Environmental Protection Agency's most hazardous procedures.

Resa Dimino, outreach coordinator for solid wastes for the Environmental Action Foundation, said she is pleased with efforts being made in CD packaging.

"We think definitely it's a step in the right direction and a positive move environmentally," she said. "CDs have traditionally been over-packaged."

"We were given the prototype," Dimino said. "We talked about using recycled materials and eliminating chlorine bleaching."

"As far as I can see, CD packages aren't designed to be recycled," she said. "But they can still use recycled materials in their production."

But organizations such as Rock the Vote and the Earth Communications Office use backs of the longboxes to print messages.

These messages urge music listeners to fill out the printed forms and take part in protest.

"It's like subliminal messages," Merritt said. "Doing this is the best way of reaching people."

Rock the Vote has printed its messages on longboxes such as REM's "Out of Time."

The message presents statistics on who votes and it gives information about a Motor Voter bill introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives this year.

The Motor Voter bill would automatically register people to vote when they renewed their licenses.

Rock the Vote's message also contains a post card that can be cut out and sent in to support the Motor Voter bill.

On the Grateful Dead tribute album "Dedications," a printed postcard addressed to Sen. Robert W. Kasten Jr. is included.

The card says "Dear Senator Kasten: I am upset to learn that my tax money is being used for World Bank and IMF schemes that destroy the Rain Forest, flood farmlands and dislocate native peoples and others. Please stop funding such activities."

Atlantic Records has begun printing on its longboxes excerpts from the book "50 Things You Can Do to Save the Earth."

The tips include hints on car pooling and tuning up your car to save gas.

All the longboxes featuring messages were printed on recycled materials.

"It's a really good way of getting their message out to the people," Merritt said.

"I don't know anybody who doesn't buy music. Rock the Vote, they were trying to reach their target audience. But will anybody really take the time to cut those out?"

Interviewing tips subject of lecture by professionals

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

The president of a management group says there is life after academics.

David Estes, president of the Estes Management Group, said students should take their studies seriously but also should understand that not everything about life can be taught in a textbook.

"There is a real world out there that students can only learn about with experience," Estes said.

Estes will present his philosophy at a seminar titled "Ask the Pros" at 7 tonight in the Student Center Auditorium. The seminar is sponsored by the University Placement Center.

It will be conducted as a panel discussion in which four panelists will give information on interviewing tips and techniques, said Pam Good, a placement counselor for the University Placement Center.

Estes will speak along with David Soldat, employee relations director for Motorola, Karen Worley, human resource representative for Chubb Group of Insurance Co. and Glenn Edwards, director of personnel with Marion Pepsi Cola.

Estes will speak on preparation research, before interviews, appropriate dress for interviews, ethical views on interviews and the different stages of interviews.

Shariene R. Matten, a science and policy staff biologist with the EPA, will address the release of genetically engineered organism into the environment.

The seminar is at 4 p.m. Thursday in Lawson 231.

Matten will discuss two frameworks of law: the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act and the Toxic Substances Control Act.

Lakota Sioux pow-wow festivals among oldest U.S. dance tradition

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

Wes Newholy strapped wings of feathers to his back and adjusted the baseball cap on his head that read "I Love Dancing."

"I've been doing it all my life," he said. "It comes naturally."

Newholy is a member of a group of Sioux Indians who traveled from Pine Ridge reservation in Lakota, S.D., to perform traditional dances at the International Cultural Show Sunday afternoon in the Student Center ballrooms.

The Lakota Sioux have performed at the International Festival for the past four years, said Dar Walks Out, president of the Friends of Native Americans and a Sioux Indian.

Tae Lakota Sioux usually perform at the pow-wows of different tribes beginning in March and rarely get a chance to perform on stage, she said.

A pow-wow is a festival where tribes of Indians gather and celebrate for four days, competing for titles such as princess and head dancer, Walks Out said.

The dances the Sioux performed are among the oldest types of U.S. dance, and Newholy said he learned them when he was very young.

"I learned from my parents when I was a little boy and first started walking," Newholy said.

The group performed a Sneak-Up Dance, a re-enactment of a battle between two warriors that happened in the early 1800s when Newholy's great-grandfather was a child.

Newholy portrays a Sioux warrior, whose family becomes separated from their camp. They are attacked by a lone warrior, performed by Wade Broken Nose.

Newholy, bedecked in a spray of colorful feathers, dances in front of the group, unaware of Broken Nose, who crouches behind the dancers.

The warriors circle the line of dancers until Newholy turns around, surprising the unknown warrior.

ENROLLMENT, from Page 1

"I don't think we'll see the kind of decreases that were previously projected," he said.

"But if the economy were to turn around in the next few months before the next high school class graduates, we might see a different picture," he said.

But the economy cannot take all the credit for boosting SIUC's enrollment.

"We've done a good job at the University in recruiting and showing prospective students the opportunities we have," he said.

Harry G. Miller, associate vice president for academic affairs at SIUC, said the increase in enrollment raises certain questions in the minds of University officials.

"The enrollment figures certainly reflect the reputation and standing of SIUC the institution," he said.

But the biggest question University officials are "grappling" with now is whether SIUC has the resources to provide education to that number of students, Miller said.

Spring totals at SIUC show 19,689 enrolled in undergraduate programs, an increase of 548 from last year.

"The real test will come next fall when we see how many students actually show up," he said.

Keim said the enrollment figures are not a problem because along with the increase there has been a shift to upperclassmen.

"We're about two to one with respect to juniors and seniors to freshmen and sophomores," he said.

The impact of this will be whether juniors and seniors are finding enough classes to fulfill requirements, Keim said.

Keim said resources are definitely a problem, but one option could be to make the class size larger.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said the college has managed to accommodate students this semester by placing them in classes where there is space.

"In some cases this puts students out of sequence," he said. Some students have had to take 12 hours instead of 15 this semester.

Spring totals at SIUC show 19,689 enrolled in undergraduate programs, an increase of 548 from last year.

Freshmen on campus account for 2,910 students compared to 3,034 a year ago.

Sophomores account for 2,888 students on campus, which is a decrease of 292 from last year.

Students studying for a master's or doctoral degrees total 5,794. There are 291 students studying for law degrees and 263 for medical degrees.

APPLE, from Page 3

Northern Illinois University and major Chicago area colleges and universities.

The majority of Golden Apple Scholars are from low-income and minority backgrounds.

To date, 80 students have been accepted into the program. The number will expand to 140 scholars by the end of 1991.

Risa Caudle, a freshman special education major at Loyola University in Chicago, said she first learned about the program from her high school guidance counselor.

"I originally wanted to be a divorce lawyer, but the field is so cold on feelings. I always loved being with children and teaching them, so I decided to teach because the feeling I get from it does not compare to anything else," Caudle said.

"The mentor program is especially great because they match each student up with a practicing teacher who has a similar personality and interests. My mentor and I are a lot alike," she said.

Caudle said she plans to stay in Chicago to teach behavioral disorder students after she graduates.

Mentoring from Golden Apple winning teachers continues into the scholar's early years of teaching.

Stephen Bourmes, a junior English education major at Northwestern Illinois University in Evanston, said the mentoring program is one of the best parts of the program.

"There are more scholars than mentors so many of the mentors have more than one scholar to support, so the whole group may meet for dinner to discuss grades, problems in teaching, or whatever," Bourmes said.

The program has helped him to become a better disciplinarian and to work out the snags in his teaching technique, he said.

round trip," Beckman said.

U.S.-based air carriers reported net income losses of over three billion in 1990, said Jeff Gorham of the Office of Aviation Statistics in Washington.

Levin said only the Pacific Rim Airlines remained profitable after the war.

"Because nations in that part of the world were little affected by the in the Gulf war, most passengers kept on flying," he said.

Officials of the International Air Transport Association predicted that as a result of Desert Storm and the U.S. recession, 1991 losses would be even greater.

Net losses for the first three quarters of 1991 were more than four and a half billion, said Gorham.

"This indicates that expenditures were substantially higher than carriers' revenue earnings last year," he said.

The industry as a whole had income gains in 1988 and 1989 of more than $1 billion, he said.

About 200 smaller carriers, including Capital, People Express and New York Air have failed to survive against stronger carriers in the last 13 years of deregulation.

But sale of slots, gates and U.S. routes must first be approved by the Transportation Department to insure larger hub systems do not shut out smaller carriers.

Five airlines now control 21 of the 29 U.S. city hubs.

Airlines charge higher fares to consumers on routes to airports where they control the majority of gates, Levin said.

"High concentration leads to higher fares," he said.

Without regulation, the airline company is free to charge what ever they choose, he said.

Engineers Week Feb. 16 to 22.

Contestants will become active participants in different games.

Two of the most popular events in the past have been the egg drop and a game involving the construction of a paper airplane, said Linda Helstern, assistant to the dean for external affairs in the College of Engineering and Technology.

The object of the egg drop is to protect it from breakage during a four-story fall and have it packaged in the smallest and lightest container.

Another favorite is the paper aircraft design, involving the construction and flight of a paper plane.

In Bridge Over No Man's

Gorge contestants design and build a bridge using 30 plastic straws and scissors. The bridge withstands the most weight wins.

The object of Precision Pacing is to guess the distance between a network of points. Quick Fingers asks competitors to solve a complex math problem with a hand-held calculator.

Meningitis

Definition and Cause

Meningitis is an inflammation of the membranes that surround the brain and spinal cord. Meningitis can be caused by viruses or bacteria.

• Viral meningitis (also called aseptic meningitis) is generally less severe than bacterial meningitis and resolves without specific treatment. Viral meningitis is most frequently due to a viral infection in the stomach and intestine (enterovirus). A small number of cases are transmitted by insects such as mosquitoes or ticks (arbovirus). There tends to be seasonal increases in viral meningitis cases in late summer and early autumn. There are, on average, 500 cases of viral meningitis in Illinois annually; fewer than 1 percent are fatal. The highest attack rates are in children younger than one year.

• Bacterial meningitis is often quite severe and may result in permanent brain damage, such as hearing loss or, rarely, mental retardation. More antibiotics were used, at least 70 percent of persons with bacterial meningitis died of the infection. With modern antibiotic treatment, the fatality rate is usually 15 percent or less, but the patient may still suffer long-term neurologic problems. Bacterial meningitis occurs most often in three forms:

- 1) Haemophilus meningitis, caused by Haemophilus influenzae type b or Hib, is the most common bacterial meningitis in children aged 5 years or younger. (Occurrence of the disease in persons older than age 5 is extremely rare.) There are, on average, 230 cases of Haemophilus meningitis in Illinois annually; fewer than 10 percent are fatal.
- 2) Meningococcal meningitis, caused by Neisseria meningitidis, is primarily a disease of young children. The incidence of cases declines with ages older than 1 year, and the relatively few adult cases generally occur among those housed under one roof, such as in barracks or dormitories. The disease most often occurs during spring and winter. (In a very small proportion of infected persons, the organism can cause meningococemia, a severe blood infection.) There are, on average, 100 cases of meningococcal meningitis in Illinois annually; approximately 7 percent are fatal.
- 3) Pneumococcal meningitis, caused by Streptococcus pneumoniae, generally strikes infants, the elderly and high risk individuals. There are, on average, 100 cases of pneumococcal meningitis in Illinois annually. In general, 5 percent to 10 percent of cases are fatal; however, in persons with certain pre-existing serious illnesses, the rate can be 20 percent to 40 percent.

How It's Spread

Meningitis is not highly contagious. Both viral and bacterial meningitis are transmitted from person to person through direct contact with nose or throat secretions. In addition, healthy persons can have these bacteria in their throats and spread them to others. In addition, fewer persons can have these bacteria in their throats and spread them to others. Fortunately, fewer than one in 100 household, day care or classroom contacts of a person with meningitis will become sick with meningitis. An infected person can transmit the disease by coughing or sneezing directly in the face of others, kissing a person on the mouth or sharing a glass or cup.

Viral meningitis can also be transmitted as a result of failure to wash hands after contact with infected stool. Children, whose hygiene practices are below the level of most adults, are more likely to transmit and suffer from meningitis.

Symptoms and Susceptibility

Meningitis usually starts with sudden fever, headache and stiff neck. Other symptoms may include nausea, vomiting, aversion to bright light, confusion and sleepiness. In newborns and small infants, the classic findings of fever, headache and neck stiffness may be absent or difficult to detect, and the infant may show only extreme listlessness, irritability, poor feeding and sometimes vomiting. As the disease progresses, both infants and older patients may have seizures and decreased alertness progressing to coma. Meningitis can also produce very mild symptoms, such as a low-grade fever, malaise lasting 2 to 3 days and headache.

Although persons at greatest risk of meningitis are household contacts, most persons are not susceptible to meningitis because they have had prior exposure to the particular strain of viral or bacterial infection and have become immune.

Treatment

Bacterial meningitis requires immediate medical attention by a physician and can be treated with a number of antibiotics. Appropriate antibiotic treatment of most common types of bacterial meningitis should reduce the fatality rate to less than 10 percent, though the fatality rate is higher in infants and the elderly.

The diagnosis is usually made by growing bacteria from a sample of spinal fluid. The fluid is obtained by performing a spinal tap, in which a needle is inserted into an area in the lower back where fluid in the spinal canal is readily accessible. Identification of the type of bacteria responsible for the illness is important for selecting effective antibiotics.

In cases of viral meningitis, treatment is usually limited to keeping the patient hydrated and reducing fever.

Prevention

Transmission of meningitis can be prevented by raising the level of hygiene among persons at risk of infection and those who might be spreading the disease. Persons should cover their noses and mouths when sneezing or coughing and discard used tissues promptly. Wash hands thoroughly following exposure to respiratory secretions or fecal matter, including handling of soiled handkerchiefs, diapers and so forth. To avoid exposure, persons should not share cigarettes, straws, cups, glasses or eating utensils. Eating and drinking utensils can be used by others after they have been washed.

For bacterial meningitis, household contacts and others who have close personal contact with infected persons are recommended to receive the antibiotic, rifampin, which kills bacteria living in throat secretions. Since the recommendations for use of rifampin vary according to the specific situation, it is best to consult a physician or local health department for recommendations. Even if rifampin is taken, close contacts should be observed, and any signs of disease should be promptly evaluated by a physician.

Vaccines for Hib and Neisseria meningitidis are now available. Two vaccines for Hib are licensed for use in infants beginning at 2 months of age. The American Academy of Pediatrics and the Advisory Committee of Immunization Practices both recommend vaccination of all infants beginning at 2 months of age. A third vaccine is only licensed for children 15 months of age or older. Neisseria meningitidis can attack persons of any age, but is relatively uncommon in the United States; therefore, meningococcal vaccine is recommended only for persons traveling to other countries where epidemics are in progress.

TIPS

Good hygiene practices prevent the spread:

- ✓ cover nose and mouth when sneezing or coughing;
- ✓ discard used tissues properly;
- ✓ wash hands after handling soiled tissues, handkerchiefs or diapers; and
- ✓ don't share cigarettes, straws, cups, glasses or eating utensils

When the patient is hospitalized, the following precautions should be taken:

- The patient should be isolated from other patients.
- The patient should be kept in a private room.
- The patient should be kept in a room with no other patients.
- The patient should be kept in a room with no other patients.

game. The Salukis, 10-2 in the conference and 16-5 overall, only have six Gateway games left this season, four of which are at home. Those four should prove to be the toughest for SIUC, but it has won 19 Gateway games in a row in the Arena and is 7-1 overall at home this season.

The Salukis play Indiana State Thursday, and Illinois State Saturday. If SIUC wins its next four games, the decisive game of the season could be on March 5 at the Arena against Southwest Missouri, which is ranked 12th in the nation by the USA Today poll.

One of the problems with attendance could be the lack of support for women's basketball in general. All of the Gateway schools have low support except SMSU, which has had a huge season ticket base for women's games for a long time.

SIUC lost to SMSU, 12-1, earlier this season at Springfield, Mo., 90-63. The early season showdown of the Gateway elite packed the Hammons Student Center with 9,108 fans.

But that was not the only time the Bears packed the center. SMSU has averaged 4,510 people a game this season.

SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said fans in the stands are a tremendous importance to the team.

"We have a great core group of fans, and now we just need to expand," Scott said. "Student support is an area we need to tap."

"There is a combination of factors that increase or decrease fan support," she said. "Of course any time you're winning you're going to get more support. Southwest has more support because for one they have a bigger metropolitan area, and also, they have spent a lot of money and done a great job in promoting. That is something SIUC needs to work hard to improve on."

The men's team, which was picked to finish first this season, is in first place. The Dawgs have attracted almost eight times as many fans as the women this season, averaging 5,773 people a game.

But that is still not good. Only two other Missouri Valley teams have drawn fewer people.

SMSU, which is one game behind SIUC in the Valley, is averaging about 7,900 fans a game. The Bears have won eight games in a row, and undoubtedly will sell out the Feb. 29 nationally televised game against SIUC. Illinois State, which is also one game out, has the highest attendance, averaging 8,478 fans a game. Tulsa, which is a game and a half out of first place, is averaging 6,545 fans on its home court.

The men's Monday night game against Wichita State drew a paltry 4,658, the second smallest crowd the team has seen all season. Only the game against South Alabama had a lower attendance at 4,585.

Although the income from ticket sales has increased from last season, the attendance average has decreased. Last season SIUC finished fourth in the Missouri Valley Conference, but an average of 6,022 fans attended each game.

The Salukis only have two home games left. The men play Tulsa Saturday night after the women's game and play Northern Iowa March 2.

The highest attendance figures for Saluki home games were during break. It could be that the community thinks the student body would be eager to pack the Arena when school is in session, but obviously the community was wrong.

Students jump on the bandwagon for champion professional teams but will not pay $2 to see an exciting brand of college basketball and possibly two championships.

More students should start taking notice of the basketball teams at SIUC.

The student body can still prove to the Saluki basketball teams, the Carbondale community and SIUC opponents that the students do support Saluki athletics.

HOOPS, from Page 1—

JUNIOR FORWARD Ashraf Amaya continues to lead the Salukis and the MVC in scoring and rebounding. He is averaging 19.1 points and 10.6 boards a game. The rebounding total ranks him 23rd in the nation.

Amaya had gone four games in a row without scoring more than 15 points prior to the game Monday with Wichita State. He averaged 12.8 points during that stretch but got 22 against the Shockers.

The 6-8 big man is 14th on the Salukis' all-time scoring list with 1,176 points. He trails Randy House, who played from 1986 to 1989, by 73 points and all-time leading scorer Charlie Vaughn, who scored 2,088 from 1959 to 1962, by 912. Amaya would have to average 22.24 points a game for the rest of the season and through his senior year to catch Vaughn.

FRESHMAN FORWARD Marcus Timmons had two of his strongest games in a Saluki uniform in the wins over Tulsa and Wichita State.

Timmons, who has started every game, is averaging 10.1 points and 6.7 rebounds. He had 15 points and 4 boards at Tulsa and 13 points and 12 boards against WSLU.

Amaya said Timmons is getting more comfortable on the court and has improved his defense and passing.

"He is playing with a lot of maturity for a freshman," Amaya said.
